SEEK SIDEWALK PROJECT FUNDS

Proposed Business Area Im- provement Comes Before Council Tonight

IN WPA PROJECT LIST

$7,000 Needed as City's Con- tribution in Purchase of Material

City council at its meeting to- night will consider ways and means of raising approximately $7,000 needed for purchase of ma- terials to assure carrying out of a proposed WPA project to rebuild sidewalks along the uptown busi- ness sections of four of Marion's principal streets.

Papers Not Located

While there appeared to be a difference of opinion between WPA officials and city officials as to the whereabouts of the papers and official forms out- lining the project, Service Director C. K. Mercer said the matter would be brought before council re- gardless of whether the papers were located in the WPA or city files.

FINANCING PLAN UNCERTAIN

There is no money in the city coffers to finance the material cost and since the city has re- fused its legal debt limit on an- other bond issue, Mercer said, some other means of raising the funds would have to be de- vised. He has suggested that Marion merchants be called upon to fur- nish approximately seven cents a square foot for the rebuilding of walks in front of their business places. Mercer is of the opin- ion that this suggestion is impractical in this case because it would contrib- ute to the business of the city.

Concert at Church Opens Civic Orchestra Season

Audience Delighted With Work of Musicians and Toledo Coloratura Soprano.

A program which has promised a season of high quality music was given by the Marion Civic Orchestra in its first concert of the 1935-36 season last night at the First Presbyterian church.

An audience which varied in appreciation in the street and sustained applause throughout the program, greeted the orchestra, which in turn gave a splendid account of its work of rehearsal in preparation for the concert.

Showing the appreciation of the audience, Mrs. Abram Furusky, under whose directorship the orchestra was organized last year and who is again acting as conductor and Miss Fern Hall of Toledo, a young coloratura soprano who should go far in the field of music. Her contribution to the evening's entertainment was two groups of three numbers each, to which the audience demanded encore. Adding immeasurably to the voice numbers were the accompaniments played by Mrs. Harold K. Mouser.

Schubert Number First

The program opened with Schubert's "Marche Militaire" which the orchestra played with brilliant bringing out the sturdy rhythm and grandeur of the composition and displaying the harmonious blending of the woodwind instruments.

The orchestra's first group of three numbers by Greg, was in pleasing contrast to the opening number, and brought out in distinctive style the composer's national spirit. The first two, "Shepherd Boy" and "Norwegian Rustle March," portrayed the pastoral and rustic life of the country with the feeling and understanding while the "Lullaby and March of the Dwarfs" echoed the old Norse legends.

This group was followed by Miss Hall's first trio of numbers in which she won instant favor with the audience. She possesses a voice of lovely quality and range and sings with the artistry worthy of those many years her senior in concert work. She sang "Care Selva" by Handel, "Le Coeur de Ma Mie," Jacques-Dalcroze and "The Nightingale and the Rose," Saint Saens. Her encore was "On Wings of Song," Mendelssohn.

Haydn's colorful "Minuet from Military Symphony" was the orchestra's next number, and in this the musicians responded to

Mr. Kuschny's directing with a clearness of style and finish approaching perfection. Opening with full orchestra in the chorus from the opera "Pique Igors" by Borodine, the orchestra displayed some of its best work in this number. Based on an old Russian epic describing Pique Igors war against Polovtsi it is an example brought out all the vocal colorings of the melodious and optimistic composition.

Waltz Scores with Audience

If the orchestra had one number better than another it was the last, a waltz "Blue Danube" by Strauss, which the orchestra played with a variety of theme interpretation deserved by the musical masterpiece.

Miss Hall's second group, and a last number, "Pique Igors" I Tragic, a Russian three-step by Rubinstein closed the program.

It was in the area "Pique Igors" from Verdi's opera, "Rigoletto," the last number of her closing group, that Miss Hall was given an opportunity to display her colorful range and vocal technique. Her clearness of diction and tone made this one of the loveliest of the two groups, completing the trio with "The Sligh" a waltz number by Liszt and "Lullaby" by Scott. Her encore was an Italian folk song, "Cantilena" by Pestlova.

The orchestra's last number, the Russian three-step, was a festive arrangement picturing the Cossacks on their way to the dance, and reaching a climax in the closing flourish.

Despite the unfavorable weather and conflicting holiday attractions the concert drew an audience of approximately 400 music lovers of Marion and surrounding territory.

CHRISTMAS DINNER IS HELD BY CLASS

Covers were placed for 38 members and guests at the annual Christmas dinner meeting of the Loyol Women's class of the Central Christian church, held yesterday noon at the church. Colors of red and white were used in the table decorations. Rev. and Mrs. James O. Dodd, Rev. M. L. Buckley, Mrs. Lulu Burdge, Mrs. Frances Fisher and Elmer Blackwood were guests.

Mrs. Bert Woodruff gave a toast to the class, to which Mrs. W. P. Cunniff replied. Rev. Dodd, pastor, gave Christmas greetings and Rev. Buckley, former pastor, gave a Christmas reading. The program was in charge of Mrs. T. P. Cagerty, Mrs. Charles Swisher, Mrs. John Lynn and Mrs. Ed Wall were hostesses.

CHURCH WILL GIVE CHILDREN'S PARTY

The children of the Junior church, primary and beginners departments of the Central Christian church will be given a Christmas party Saturday from 2 to 4 p. m. in the church parlors.

Hosts will be the superintendents and teachers of the three departments.

EVEN A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP DID NOT REST THIS LADY

Felt tired, worn out, nervous, had poor appetite, and digestion was weak. Says Vendol has changed all this.
I started taking a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and I feel like a new woman. I am able to sleep at night, and I am able to eat my food. I am able to do my work, and I am able to enjoy my life. I am able to live, and I am able to love. I am able to be happy, and I am able to be healthy. I am able to be a woman, and I am able to be a mother. I am able to be a friend, and I am able to be a neighbor. I am able to be a citizen, and I am able to be a patriot. I am able to be a woman, and I am able to be a mother. I am able to be a friend, and I am able to be a neighbor. I am able to be a citizen, and I am able to be a patriot.

MRS. CATHERINE FERNANDEZ

Man Declared Weaker Sex by Noted Scientist

Mayo Clinic Physician Blasts Bahel Malt Stronger Than Female

CINCINNATI, Dec. 17.—A Mayo Clinic physician has declared the male sex weaker than the female. Dr. J. H. Mayo, who has been a resident of the Mayo Clinic for many years, has made this statement in a lecture given at the University of Cincinnati. He said that the male sex is weaker than the female sex in many respects, including strength, endurance, and resistance to disease. He said that the female sex is stronger than the male sex in many respects, including strength, endurance, and resistance to disease.

More than 100 children die in 10 years

A 10 years of age, a boy's life expectancy is four years after that of a girl. This is the statement made by a noted statistician in a report on the life expectancy of children in the United States. The report shows that the life expectancy of a boy at the age of 10 is only four years, while the life expectancy of a girl at the same age is seven years. This is a shocking fact, and it shows that the life expectancy of children in the United States is very low.

Cholera.

At a recent meeting of military surgeons, the problem of tropical diseases was discussed. Among such ailments are included malaria, scarlet fever, cholera, typhus, sleeping sickness, dysentery, leprosy and the relapsing fever. These are the outstanding diseases of the tropics.

These ailments are a great problem to an invading army. In the Ethiopian campaign special precautions had to be taken against these infections.

Contrary to a common belief, the existence of the so-called tropical climates. Indeed, before the application of our present-day machine disease is not limited to tropical regions, it is not unheard of to encounter these diseases in epidemic form in our own country.

Quarantine officers are always on the watch out for tropical diseases. In the domestic ports, not only the passengers, but their clothing and baggage are inspected upon arrival. In the foreign ports inspection is made of the vessel, passengers and seamen before embarkation to the western world. To prevent the introduction and spread of disease from abroad, the ships are fumigated as well.

Of all the other tropical diseases few are as dreaded as cholera. This ailment is rarely met in America being confined to Asiatic countries and South America. It is almost always found in the Philippines, and frequently appears there in epidemic form.

Like many other of the tropical diseases, cholera is usually associated with filth and unhygienic conditions. It is caused by a germ called the "apathium cholera." This organism is also known as the "comma bacillus," because of its close resemblance to the punctuation mark, the comma.

These germs are found in contaminated food and water. The disease is quickly spread by faulty sewerage. The germs are transmitted to man by soiled fingers, contaminated food, clothes and flies.

Cholera is characterized by diarrhea, cramps and prostration. Even a mild form of cholera, if it attacks a person unaccustomed to tropical conditions, may prove to be quite serious.

Cholera is difficult to eradicate because the germs may be carried by persons who are unaware that they harbor the infection. Such persons are called "carriers." They carry the germs of cholera and yet do not themselves suffer from the disease. Of course they are a constant menace to others.

Until some definite cure or means of prevention is discovered, cholera will be a menace to civilized peoples.

DEMPSEY'S FORMER TRAINER DIVORCED

By The Associated Press LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 23—Lena Basquette, movie dancer and actress, won a divorce yesterday from Theodore Hayes, former trainer of Jack Dempsey.

Hayes, she testified, threatened her and once became so angry she fled her home with her sister and a month-old baby.

Judge Harry R. Archbald was informed a settlement was effected out of court, with Hayes paying one-fourth of his income to support their son, now 20 months old. The couple was married Dec. 19, 1931.

WEATHER MAY KILL DUCKS HELD IN OIL

By The Associated Press CLEVELAND, Dec. 23—R. M. Cannell, fish and game protector feared today that hundreds of wild ducks, stranded in oil on Lake Erie west of here, would be killed by the cold.

Cannell was heading the rescue of a boat and nets which had been taken from Port Clinton to Detroit for use in a similar situation. Some of the 300 ducks were taken to Brookville, Pa.

TUBERCULOSIS TOLL CUT DOWN IN OHIO

Two-Thirds Death Rate Reduction Reported in Christmas Seal Survey.

Special to The Star
COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 29.—The tuberculosis death rate in Ohio per 100,000 population has declined two-thirds in the last 24 years, according to a survey just completed. The report of the survey was given out today by the Ohio
Public Health Association in connection with the Christmas seal sale, which is now in progress.

In 1910, the survey revealed the tuberculosis death rate in Ohio per 100,000 was 140. Last year it was 46.03. Deaths in Ohio last year from tuberculosis numbered 2,411 compared with 1,410 in 1933 when the death rate was 94 per 100,000.

Tuberculosis is still the leading cause of death in early in its life between the ages of 15 and 45—one of the most productive economically and this presents a very serious health problem. One and one-half as many young wa-men as young women die of tuberculosis each year.

Joys of Hookey No Longer Lure Pupils from School

By The Associated Press.
COLUMBIA, O., Dec. 26.—The old joys of playing hookey from school is almost a thing of the past. You have the word for this of Edward K. Dietrich, assistant state director of education and former superintendent of schools at Columbus.

First it is almost impossible to play hookey without being caught with the rigid system of checking attendance in Ohio. Dietrich said, in that few children now care to keep out of school.

Boards on Lookout
District school boards will keep an even sharper eye on attendance beginning next year. The amount of money they will receive under the school foundation program depends upon the average daily attendance. It is obvious that they will seek to keep the attendance high.

School attendance has increased sharply in recent years. Dietrich said. He attributed these factors: Children realize more than ever the need for education. Unemployment has released more children for school. Schools offer children more enjoyment in extra-curricular activities, sports and social life. Closer cooperation between parents and teachers through parent-teacher associations. Stricter physical and medical at-

MISS FLORA BLAZER LARUE HOSTESS

Entertains Twentieth Century Club and Guests.

Special in The Star
LARUE, Dec. 26.—Miss Flora Blazer was hostess to the Twentieth Century club and two guests, Mary Jane Barden and Phyllis Anne Virden Tuesday afternoon. The program was in keeping with Christmas and carols were sung. Mrs. Adla Henkle and Mrs. J. W. Hoagland contributed papers. The annual Christmas exchange was conducted. In a contest Mrs. C. H. Topfiff won the prize. The hostess assisted by Mrs. E. E. Blazer served a two-course lunch. The next meeting will be with Mrs. C. E. Gillespie, Dec. 31.

The new officers of Mary Lenox Chapter O. E. S. took their places Tuesday night and the worthy matron, Miss Dorothy L. Burroughs, assisted by Mrs. Lena Gillespie as marshal installed H. J. Davis as sentinel, who was unable to be present at installation. A Christmas party and exchange of gifts followed the meeting.

E. E. Everett entertained the Brotherhood of the M. E. church at his home north of town Monday night. H. J. Davis was in charge of the program and Rev. George Hard presided for the devotions. Each member responded with an incident of childhood pertaining to Christmas. Plans were made to sponsor the father and son banquet some time soon. There were 20 present and Mrs. George Raub and Mrs. W. P. LaRue assisted in serving. Howard Bailey will entertain in January.

Mrs. A. I. Hafer assisted by Mrs. E. J. Hafer entertained the Missionary society of the M. E. church Wednesday afternoon. The worship service was in charge of Mrs. H. J. Davis, consisting of the Christmas lesson and singing of carols. Plans were made to send a Christmas box to a school in Cedarblow, Ga. Those contributing to the program were: Mrs. Clyde Robinson, Mrs. Mary Wiest, Mrs. Hafer, Mrs. C. A. Robinson, Miss Flora Blazer, Mrs. G. W. Herd, Mrs. C. M. Barden, Mrs. Bernard Lyttel, Mrs. J. S. Mulvane and Mrs. Emma Gaston. Mrs. George Oberdier and Mrs. Theodore McElhenry will entertain in January.

Married Comrades

BY ADELE GARRISON

Roderick learns what his punishment is to be.

MY COY in the nursery camp living room was nearest the door of the room occupied by Roderick and Junior. The windows of both rooms were open, and as I am a light sleeper while Mary is exactly the opposite, the sounds of the boys' voices in earnest conversation early in the morning awakened me.

"Haven't you got any idea what she's planning?" Roderick asked anxiously, and I wondered if he referred to some activity of Betty Gibbs, the small girl whose lofty patronage had so disturbed them the day before.

"Not a smidgin," Junior replied, and added not hesitatingly, but as one stating a fact:

"Usually I tell what she's thinking about, but this time I'm up a stump. But, whatever it is, I don't believe it's going to be very hard. But anything is going to be tough. Gee! Rod! whatever possessed you to take that car out? She couldn't do anything else than make you pay plenty."

"Talking of punishment. They were talking about me and the punishment I had said must be meted out to Roderick for his escapade with the car. The temptation was great to be still and listen to their colloquy, hoping that I could find some hint for a solution of the problem.

But instead I sprang from bed, thrust my feet into bedroom slippers, invested myself in a big bathrobe, and went to their door and knocked, hearing as I did Roderick's reply to Junior's reproach.

"Don't I know she's just got to do somepin' to me?" he wailed. "And you needn't go preaching about the car. I feel worse about it than you ever could."

"How d'ya get that way?" Junior demanded wrathfully, and then broke off his angry reply to call, "Who's there?"

"Mother," I replied laconically. "May I come in?"

"Sure thing," they chorused, and I opened the door to find them sitting bolt upright in bed, patently having sprung from a recumbent position at my knock.

Boys Are Anxious

"Good morning, boys," I said punctiliously. They returned an equally meticulous greeting, and I plunged directly into the subject nearest their hearts and mine.

"I couldn't help hearing you just now," I said. "Oh! I didn't hear much, for I've only just wakened. But I heard enough to realize that you're wondering and worrying over the punishment you're going to have, Roderick, so I thought we might as well settle it now as any other time."

There was as much anxiety in Junior's eyes, I saw, as in Roderick's, something for which I was thankful, and I resolved to make the ordeal of decision as short as possible.

"I want you to tell me frankly, Roderick," I said. "Would you rather have some big punishment all at once and get it over with, or a smaller one to continue during the time you're up here?"

"Oh, a big one, over with," Roderick said quickly, and Junior chimed the inevitable accompaniment. "You bet your boots, that's the ticket."

"Auntie Madge," Roderick said hesitatingly.

"Yes, dear."

"Couldn't you have Williams give me an awful big licking?"

"I've said you before, Roderick," I said severely, "that I cannot do that. You must make up your mind to take the punishment I select."

Heavily! I realize, I know, that I don't want to give you into punishment, but that I must. It wouldn't be fair to let you off, would it?"

"No, no," Roderick said emphatically. "And I'll take whatever you say," he added.

"Then I've decided this," I said. "Before I go back, I'm going to take a drive up the mountains to see Mount Washington and the other peaks about which you've read. We'll be gone several hours and have our lunch up there. Your punishment, Roderick, is that you must stay at the home while the

NEVER MIND THE LADY

by David Garth

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO.

Y... probably have three hundred and sixty-five experiences that a year. Allaire didn't. Well, where would he go?

He shrugged white shoulders. "I know more than return the compliment. How about the Pilsener? Cocktails, dress shirts."

and subtle poppyish remarks? Willett stood up. What the hell was he doing here anyway? He had nothing in common with this girl of private cars, stone mansions, and silver evening gown.

What was he doing here with the stink of the yellow river still in his nostrils and the toughest, dirtiest job of his career ahead? Hike, you hustled engineer, you can't blame the girl for not being an angel. Angels live in heaven, not in stone mansions.

Entertaining evening? Sorry, governor. His jaw almost clicked. "Not going?" The girl sounded a little startled.

"I don't like it here," he said bluntly. "I don't like anything about this picture. I didn't come here to be impressed by snuffies and chandeliers. I came here to see a swell girl."

"And what do I find? somebody sitting on a throne surrounded by mirrors and fog. Well, sometime when you have nothing else to do, drop over to Carteret, Virginia, and take a look at a new marker in the churchyard. It says: 'The storm is over now and so forth, but don't let that fool you.'"

"He was a man trying to beat a tough game, and he's through forever now, but you had an entertaining evening, so that squares everything."

She was on her feet too pale with the bloodless touch of anger. "No over ever talked to me like this before," she said furiously. "And you can't talk to me like this now. You're ruining what's left of something that was once very fine. I dislike fools, but I can't stand roughnecks. I feel cheapened."

Fool! Roughneck. Sure, he was a fool. But what did she know of roughnecks? Standing there lovely and cold, telling him he was a— He suddenly took her arm and she felt the pressure of fingers like steel.

For a moment she was rigid, furious, and then she suddenly went pliant and yielding. Her head drooped back, her eyes closed, and something bright gleamed down her cheeks.

"Oh, don't," she whispered. "Don't—please. Terry, you're hurting me."

Stricken at this new and bewildering side of her, he released her and stood back. She sank into a chair, her head averted, and the only sound in that room was the ticking of the brassbound clock as she methodically rubbed a hand up and down one arm.

"That's the end of everything," she said tensely. "I once thought the happiest moment of my life would come with the morning

"I didn't come here to be impressed," Terry said.

when I saw you again. And now—I don't want to see you—ever—because you ran out on me when I needed you, wanted you—and you're rough and wild—I needed you!"

Willett stared at her. She'd needed him. But—why? And she thought he'd run out on her. What should he do now? Burst from the cocoon of her contempt and spread the gaudy wings of the heroic butterfly?

Tell her he'd stalled the police investigation, told the court to go to hell, swayed in jail, stood in a little stone room with the haze on his shoulders and the rain rattling outside the walls?

He'd be likely to tell her that now, even if he wanted to. Hah! A couple of "hahs." A couple of deep-chested rumbling laughs.

He didn't know where the butter came from. The girl must have rung, or maybe the butter was sensitive to mental telepathy.

"Mr. Willett is leaving," the girl said quietly.

Willett looked up his hat. He looked at her again.

"Go on," he said. "Sorry, but maybe it's just as well."

She inclined her head slightly. That was all. He followed the butter out into the hall, strode down that long parquet floor. An orchestra was playing in the drawing room and some dinner guests were just entering the front door. Eleanor West was entertaining, evidently. The world was full of entertaining evenings.

Outside, he stopped and looked back at the brightly-lighted mansion. A million miles between that girl's world and his a gap that could never be closed. How insane to think it ever could have been different! Lord, what a fool he'd been.

He crossed the courtyard, went through a door and out on the street. He hailed a cruising taxi, and then stood irresolute as the cab waited.

"Where to, boss?" asked the driver.

Willett contemplated him gravely. "How about Panama?" he suggested.

The driver looked slightly uncertain.

"Or," added Willett, considering. "Alaska?"

"Is this a gag?" demanded the driver.

"Mexico isn't bad either," Willett told him. "and they're building railroads in Russia. And I'd kind of like to see the mosaic sidewalks of Rio again. Funny things, those sidewalks," he said confidentially. "If you walk along and look at them steadily you'll feel drunk."

He nodded. "Fact."

"Listen, boss," pleaded the driver. "take it easy. Better go home and rest up. Where do you live?"

"That," said Terry. "is a question I've often asked myself."

"Let's take you to a hotel."

"What hotel have you got?"

"Lots of 'em. The Willard, Shoreham, Mayflower."

"Mayflower." Willett looked speculative. "Mayflower—where have I heard that name before?"

He stood lost in thought a moment, then took a coin out of his pocket and handed it to the driver. "Flip it," he ordered. "Heads, take me to the Mayflower. Tails, Union station."

He got into the taxi. The driver tipped the coin, then shifted into gear.

The Stars Say--

For Saturday, Dec. 21

THE PLANETARY influences bearing rule on the affairs of this day may be interpreted as fairly fortunate, although these good prospects must not be jeopardized by indulgences in rash, impulsive or tumultuous conduct. There is prospect of an elderly person or long established institution being friendly disposed to such a substantial degree as to give stability to the fortunes.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of substantial increase of the fortunes, probably by gift, inheritance or insurance. But be careful not to jeopardize such good fortune by disputes, wrangling or impulsive conduct. All pertaining to writings should flourish.

A child born on this day may be hard working, faithful and ambitious, but should be disciplined in infancy as to rash and headstrong behavior.
